Feel the colors of the Andes in one day

Looking for an epic one-day hike in Cusco? The Rainbow Mountain Peru tour is your answer. Rising above 5,000 meters (16,000 ft), Rainbow Mountain—also called Vinicunca—is one of the most stunning sights in the Andes, paired perfectly with the nearby Red Valley.

Your adventure begins early with hotel pickup and a scenic drive to the trailhead, where our chef prepares a fresh breakfast before a 2-hour hike to the summit. The altitude is a challenge, but the views are worth it.

After exploring the colorful landscape and the striking Red Valley, enjoy a warm picnic lunch before returning to Cusco.

TreXperience offers small-group tours with private transport, expert guides, meals, and full support—from your hotel to the summit and back.

Full Itinerary

Cusco – Pitumarca – Hiking Start –
Vinicunca Rainbow Mountain – Red Valley

We'll pick you up at 4:30 a.m. from your hotel in Cusco (city center, hotels, Airbnb, or hostels) and drive about 3 hours to the trailhead. Upon arrival, our chef will prepare a delicious breakfast with coffee or coca tea while you enjoy panoramic views of the Vilcanota Mountain range — the perfect start before your hike to the 5,000-meter summit.

After breakfast, begin a 2-hour uphill hike to Vinicunca, also known as Rainbow Mountain. The trail climbs gradually, with a steep section near the top. Along the way, you'll see snow-capped peaks, herds of llamas and alpacas, and endless Andean landscapes that grow more spectacular with every step. Bring warm clothing, gloves, and a camera, as the temperature at the summit can drop below freezing.

At the top, your guide will explain the geological origin of the mountain's colors and its importance to local communities. After taking in the breathtaking views, continue for 30 minutes to the nearby Red Valley, a stunning, rarely visited area known for its deep red hues and dramatic scenery.

You'll then descend for about an hour to the trailhead, where a freshly prepared picnic lunch will be waiting. Enjoy traditional Peruvian dishes made from local ingredients before boarding the bus back to Cusco, arriving around 5:30 p.m.

Times may vary depending on weather, trail conditions, and walking pace.
