Full Itinerary

Cusco – Hiking Start – Vinicunca Rainbow Mountain – Red Valley – Return to Cusco

We will pick you up at 4:30 in the morning from your hotel in Cusco City, near the city center, including hotels, Airbnbs, apartments, or hostels. Then, we drive for about 3 hours to the trailhead, passing through quiet Andean landscapes as the day begins.

Upon arrival, our chef will prepare a fresh picnic breakfast with multiple options. You will have time to enjoy coffee or coca tea, admire the surrounding mountains, and prepare calmly for the high-altitude hike ahead.

After breakfast, we begin the 2-hour hike to the viewpoint of Vinicunca, also known as Rainbow Mountain. The trail follows a gradual uphill path, with a steeper final section before reaching the high viewpoint above 5,000 meters.

Hike with views of the snow-capped peaks of the Ausangate Mountain Range, the highest mountain range in the Cusco region. Along the way, you may see llamas, alpacas, local herders, and wide-open landscapes that become more impressive with every step.

You will need warm layers, gloves, a hat, and a camera for this tour. Temperatures can feel very cold near the summit, especially if there is wind, clouds, or rain, so proper clothing makes a big difference.

At the Rainbow Mountain viewpoint, your guide will explain the origin of the colored mineral layers, the surrounding Andes, and the cultural meaning of this mountain for local communities.

After enjoying the landscapes of the Peruvian Andes and the panoramic views from Vinicunca, we continue with an additional hike toward the Red Valley. This area is less visited than Rainbow Mountain and offers a dramatic red landscape that feels wild, open, and unforgettable.

We then return to the trailhead with a downhill walk of about 1 hour, where our special picnic lunch will be waiting. After
